1139th meeting, March 23, 2011

Sandra and Michael Whalen presented their talk:

A Visit to the Saint-Gaudens National Historic Site

Sandra and Michael participated in the August 2010 ANA seminar trip to the Augustus Saint-Gaudens National Historic Site in Windsor, Vermont and Cornish, New Hampshire, the two locations separated by the Connecticut river. The local host was Curator Henry Duffy. Their interest in the seminar was the culmination of searching out Saint-Gaudens' sculptures on the eastern seaboard. The Spirit of Victory is one example of his work that is also reflected in his coin and medal designs. For example, Hetty Anderson's leg as represented on the Spirit of Victory is also modeled on his $20 gold piece.

Although Saint-Gaudens is primarily remembered today for his two US gold coins, he was considered the greatest American sculptor at the turn of the last century. Saint-Gaudens trained many famous sculptors recognized by numismatists such as Adolph Weinman, Victor D. Brenner, Hermon McNeil, James Earl Fraser, and Laura Gardin Fraser.

Larry V. Reppeteau

Larry Reppeteau, a PCNS member since 1973, passed away March 7, 2011 in San Jose, California, following an illness of several weeks.

Though unable to attend meetings in recent years, Larry kept his membership in PCNS. He was a past President and an elected Fellow of the Society.

A native San Franciscan, Larry had a career with the Southern Pacific Railroad, living in San Francisco, with his wife Lori, until declining health required a move to assisted living in 2009, shortly before Lori's passing.

Larry's interest in numismatics began in his early 20s. He was interested in wide areas of the study, with special interests in Indian Native States issues, early China, and ancient Bactria. He attended numerous counterfeit detection seminars, and freely shared his knowledge in that field. In later years, English and Irish numismatics kept him busy collecting and studying items often overlooked by others. His numismatic library filled his study walls.

Following Larry's retirement, he and Lori traveled regularly to England and Ireland, always looking for unusual coins, tokens, and medals, which then served as the basis for brief talks and articles.

Larry's impromptu talks during PCNS show-and-tell sessions often included more original numismatic research than the scheduled program. He was always interested in what others' collected as well, and willing to contribute his knowledge to assist in their studies.

Larry was responsible for encouraging many other collectors over the years, both to join PCNS, but, more importantly, to actively study numismatics rather than just collect the objects. He was a regular writer, with awards for articles submitted to the PCNS papers and Journal, which were often republished by other groups, both within and outside the U.S.

Those of us who knew Larry benefited from his freely-shared knowledge and his encouragement. We have lost a friend who contributed significantly to our studies, and, for many of us, influenced our own pursuits.
