DENOMINATION VERSUS VALUE

Back in 2017, our in-house expert on the tokens of Latin America,

Federico Castillo spoke about how different denominations of Latin American tokens often represented the same value, depending on local conditions.

Tokens were frequently used as payment for a set amount of work or product; such as a specific weight of coffee harvested or a particular amount of acreage cleared.

Many times, these tokens were only redeemable at company stores or for specific services.

Join us on May 22 at Fort Mason as Federico picks up where he left off in this fascinating discussion.

APRIL MEETING RECAP

Bill Hyder gave a fascinating talk on questions surrounding the origin of various replica Continental Dollars produced in the mid-19th Century. While most replicas are assumed to have been produced around the 1876 centennial of American independence, Bill's study of auction catalogs and advertisements, as well as tracing different strike patterns, leads Bill to the conclusion that many were struck in 1861 or 1862 using dies created by Robert Lovell, Jr.

Given the message of unity conveyed on the the Continental Dollar's reverse design, (the motto "We Are One" surrounded by a chain bearing the names of the original thirteen colonies), it seems entirely plausible that replicas were struck as an appeal to the origins of our nation at the beginning of the Civil War.

Thank you, Bill, for another enlightening presentation!
